

ABSTRACT

An image signal processing apparatus includes an image capturing element which performs image capturing while utilizing a plurality of types of color filters which are arranged based on repetition of a pattern determined in advance, a color change detecting part which detects a color change regarding the result of the image captured while considering the pattern, and an adder and a core processing part which generate a luminance signal regarding the result of the image captured based on the result of color change detection.